

A Singular Bet

By ALLAN G. LAMOND

We were but six line officers at a two company post in the western wilderness. We had played poker till we had won one another's money several times over, but it was the same money passing and repassing between us, and the fund didn't increase under the operation. Neither had it decreased. There was nothing to buy, neither wines, liquors nor cigars. We had brought a supply with us.

After every man of the six—the commandant didn't play poker—had been cleaned out half a dozen times, proceeded "on tap" and cleaned out every other man half a dozen times, Carter, captain of my company, remarked:

"I offer $10 to any man of this crowd who will give me a new sensation."

"Make it a hundred," said Billy Kendall, second lieutenant of E company, "and I'll try."

"I'll make it a hundred if you succeed, you to pay me a hundred if you don't."

"That's fair, I'll go you once."

"Who's to decide who wins?" asked Carter.

"I'll make a more definite proposition," replied Kendall. "I'll bet you that on or about tomorrow morning I pull old Tom's nose."

Old Tom was the major, thirty-eight years old, bald, dignified, even pompous, a martinet, and his proper name was Thomas Ordway.

"Great Scott! You'll be court-martialed and shot!"

"Do you take me?"

"I certainly do, but the money will do you no good except to pay for your funeral."

"I'll risk that, put up the funds."

Seabury, captain of F company, was made stakeholder, and he, with the two first lieutenants, were appointed umpires. The rest of the day was spent in wondering how Kendall was going to get out of losing his bet, for as to pulling the major's nose one as well as pull the nose of the secretary of war, the highest official an officer considers, except the president, who is only supposed to figure in parades. But since no one could guess what Billy was up to, we finally drifted into vigil and up and were obliged to be content with this for the rest of the day and evening.

That night the surgeon was called up to treat Mose, the major's colored striker. He found Mose throwing up his supper of pork and hard tack. The next morning Mose remained in bed. The surgeon could not see that anything was the matter with him, but Mose persuaded him to report to the major that his striker was unable for the present to perform his duties.

Just before guard mounting Kendall sent an orderly to Captain Seabury to say that as soon as the old guard had marched off some one of the umpires were to be at Old Tom's quarters ready to observe the pulling of his nose.

The major was in a bad humor that morning in consequence of the absence of his body servant and being required to get ready his own bath and perform other menial duties that were usually attended to by Mose. When the umpires heard the tramp of the guard that had been twenty-four hours on duty going to their quarters all three of them moved, at different times, so as not to attract attention, to headquarters. Near the door they rallied on the center and conferred. It was agreed that Seabury should make an excuse to go in, stay as long as he could, then come out, to be replaced by one of the others. Seabury entered, asked the major some trivial question on a matter of duty and came out, reporting that the major had his coat off and his collar unbuttoned, while Kendall was stropping a razor. In a few minutes I went in and came out to report that the major was in the chair in which Mose usually shaved him. Kendall was itching the commandant's face. Here comes Lieutenant Sykes, who had entered in his turn, laughing and sleeping his leg.

"What is it?" asked the others, crowding around him.

But Sykes was so full of laughter that he couldn't go on. Finally, when he recovered somewhat, he said:

"When I went in old Tom said apologetically, 'That infernal striker of mine had to get sick last night, and the surgeon reported that he can't shave me this morning. Mr. Kendall has kindly come to the rescue, and I am under an eternal obligation to him. What is it you want?'"

"Kendall," Sykes went on, "as soon as the major had finished speaking, took hold of old Tom's nose with the forefinger and thumb of his left hand and, pulling it first to one side then to the other, looked up at me, winked and began to shave the commandant. Carter has lost."

"I believe," said Brown, "that nasal Kendall bribed Mose to be sick."

"Sure enough," chimed in Seabury. "Let's go and find Carter."

At Carter's quarters they told the story, and the captain agreed that the joke was worth the stake. In a little while Kendall came in and told how he had bribed Mose with a ten dollar bill to take an emetic, to fool the surgeon and stay in bed the next morning. Knowing how old Tom dreaded to go without a shave and couldn't shave himself, Kendall had bribed him to let him do the job.

Grew Too Tall.

"I recall a case of genuine horn-headedness, mixed with enthusiasm, that cost a great many people a bunch of money," said an old operator. "It was during the time when a big strike meant a drop in the price of oil. The foreman of a drill crew had been instructed by the employers to use a code in the event of oil being found. If it was a big flow he was to wire, 'Pine trees grow tall.' If, on the other hand, the flow was small, 'Pine trees grow small.' Was to be the code message. The drill struck a gusher, and the following message was sent by the ivory topped individual: 'Pine trees grow tall as hell, and she is flowing all over the derrick.' Of course there were a number of men about the exchange who could understand telegraphy, and the consequence was that the price of oil dropped about $2 a barrel in a few minutes."—Louisville Times.

Intoxicated by Tobacco.

Giving evidence against a man on a charge of disorderly conduct at Bow street police court, a constable said that the accused behaved in a very violent and disorderly manner in Leicester square on Tuesday evening. He quarreled with a cabman, and eventually the witness took him into custody, believing him to be drunk. At the police station the prisoner denied that he had been drinking, and the doctor who examined him reported that he had chewed tobacco to such an extent that it had had the same effect upon him as alcohol.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Real Laziness.

The Little Russians—those of the south are said to be cleverer than the Russians of the north, but they are lazy—just how lazy may be gathered from this quotation from Mr. Maurice Baring's book, "Russian Essays and Stories":

"The Little Russian" said a Little Russian gentleman to me, "is so lazy that he will say to his wife, 'Little wife, say what you like. I have a pain in my tongue.'"

Progressive.

"When did you commit your first fatal extravagance?"

"When my boss referred to my wages as my 'salary.'"

"And when did you perpetrate this latest folly?"

"The day my wife called my salary my 'income.'"—Cleveland Leader.

Not Worth While.

"I notice that you usually tell the truth."

"Yes, I found that telling lies gets you into almost as much trouble."—Kansas City Journal.

The Feminine Paradox.

The feminine paradox is sometimes because she is not as young as she once was; the optimum of the same old forces that she is not as old as she will like to be.

CLERK DYING SAFE SEIZED

An Attachment for $36,725 Shortage Follows

ATTACK OF TYPHOID FEVER

Books Years Unchecked—Illness of the Employee Leads to the First Discoveries of the Irregularities.

New York, Aug. 18.—Adolf Gabriel, bookkeeper for the Blatz Leather company of 26 Spruce street, has been ill of typhoid for two weeks at his home. When he was taken sick the officers of the company had examination of his books made and the result was an attachment against him for $36,725.

Gabriel had been a confidential employee of the concern for 10 years and had charge of the business of the New York office. It was said the company had such confidence in him that no examination of his books was made in recent years, but that when he fell sick it was discovered that he had filed in checks for amounts greater than were indicated by the stubs or by the cash book. His salary is said to have been $70 a week.

The sheriff called at Mr. Gabriel's home and took away a safe he found there.

Mr. Gabriel has been in delirium for two weeks. His doctor says he has given up hope.

When he was stricken with typhoid a casual suggestion that his ledgers be gone over was leisurely acted on. The examination of the officers of the company at the discovery was profound.

Officers of the company went to Gabriel's home and found him in bed attended by trained nurses. Only his mother-in-law was in the house, his wife having died a year ago. His mother-in-law knew nothing and Gabriel was already delirious.

The heads of the leather company found Mr. Hamner, the manager of the Cafe Boulevard, who said he guessed he was about the only close friend Gabriel had. When they told him what they were pretty sure of he was incredulous. He says now he doesn't believe it.

Mr. Hamner told the company that on the day when he fell sick, Gabriel had got a check for $7,500 from Zimmerman & Forsyth of 9 Wall street, which check closed out his account with them. He had given this check to Hamner, who had indorsed it with Gabriel's permission and deposited it, as the sick bookkeeper requested, in Hamner's name with the German Exchange bank. That was all Hamner knew about it.

The leather company served Hamner with papers Tuesday in a proceeding to recover the face value of the check. Hamner accepted service, but remarked that until the charge against Gabriel had been pretty clearly proved he did his best to keep the $7,500 for his sick friend.

WELDS IN HER NIGHTGOWN.

Miss Cheek's Parents Stole Clothes, to Prevent Elopement.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 18.—Dressed only in nightgown and stockings, Miss Columbia Cheek was married at 3 o'clock in the morning to Guy H. Buchanan.

Buchanan and Miss Cheek had been engaged for some time, but the girl's parents bitterly opposed the match.

Miss Cheek's parents learned that the lovers planned to elope, and they locked the girl in her room, after taking away her clothes. Buchanan heard of her predicament and after midnight went in an automobile to the Cheek home.

By throwing pebbles against the window, he attracted the girl's attention and found her willing to elope, though she admitted her treacherous consisted of a nightgown and a pair of stockings. By means of a stepladder, Miss Cheek descended from her room into the arms of her lover, was put in the automobile and hurried to the rectory of the Emmanuel Baptist church.

The Rev. W. L. Gilmore was aroused and quickly made the lovers husband and wife. Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan went to a hotel, rang up the Cheek home and told of the marriage, compelling it with the request for some clothes for the bride. In a short time the bride's trunks came, accompanied with blessings.
